

FUEL INJECTION CONTROL FOR MARINE ENGINE

Abstract of the Disclosure

A watercraft includes an engine having a fuel injection system. The fuel injection system is controlled to gradually reduce a speed of the engine if a lubrication pressure detected within the engine is below a predetermined pressure. Additionally, the fuel injection system is controlled to maintain a reduced engine speed until the throttle lever is moved to a position corresponding to a lower speed.

H:\DOCS\WFD\FS17208US0A.DOC
032902

BEST AVAILABLE COPY